

It's Not That Important

Remember back when you first started your business?

If it wasn't on your very first day, I bet it was pretty soon after, that you spent a fair amount of time, (probably too much time), creating your company's logo.

It's the very first thing most other entrepreneurs do when they make the decision to start their own business too. And most take great pride in creating it.

However...

SPOILER ALERT: nobody cares about your logo!

You never hear people say: "Well I'd decided not to buy... but then, when I saw their logo I was sold!".

What's important to your potential customers is what you can do for them.

What are the benefits YOU bring to their lives? (CLUE: your logo is not one of them).

I'm sure we can all agree that's true - so with that in mind... do NOT make your logo a key piece of your businesses marketing.

In most cases, sticking a logo at the top of a letter, on the outside of an envelope, on a Facebook Ad image... will DETRACT from the marketing itself and in most instances actively put your prospects off what's inside.

A logo on an envelope reads as "this letter is from a business and therefore not important" – (unless it's the HMRC logo: Never ignore those ones!).

Now, we're not saying don't bother getting a logo created or make minimal effort with it.

Just use it in the right places and the right amount.

For example, a logo at the top of a sales letter wastes valuable real estate that should be spent on an eye-catching, attention-grabbing headline.

Put it in the footer instead.

It's Not That Important

The moral of the story: your business' logo is NOT as important as you think.

Focus on the stuff that matters to your customers and how you can connect and engage with them.

One final thing, please use a graphic designer, they will help you SHAPE your brand and save you countless hours. Leaving you to focus on areas of your marketing that will have a bigger impact on your business.

They Really Won't Care!
